

Reframing Pirltawardli: A Strategic Storytelling Proposal for the City of Adelaide's World Heritage Bid

Name: Yanrui Li

Table of contents

1.	Introduction and Client Overview	2
2.	Portfolio Overview and Word Equivalence	4
3.	Work Sample 1: Research and Content Audit Snapshot	5
4.	Work Sample 2: Pirltawardli Fact Sheet.....	7
5.	Work Sample 3: Website Landing Page Copy.....	9
6.	Work Sample 4: Social Media Content Pack.....	11
7.	Work Sample 5: Four-Week Social Media Calendar.....	20
8.	Work Sample 6: Short Explainer Video Script and Storyboard	22
9.	Work Sample 7: QR Marker and Digital User Journey	23
10.	Work Sample 8: Evaluation Snapshot.....	24

1. Introduction and Client Overview

This portfolio is showcasing a group of tools of strategic communication and digital storytelling that have been created for the City of Adelaide's World Heritage Bid. The portfolio is inspired by the project idea Reframing Pirltawardli, which uses Pirltawardli as a local narrative entry point to help public audiences understand more easily and thoroughly the broader World Heritage story of Adelaide.

The City of Adelaide is the local government which is responsible for Adelaide CBD, North Adelaide, and the parklands around them. Its works range from planning, governance, heritage conservation, cultural development, public engagement, to community services. The communication mission of the City that is relevant to this project is the progress of the World Heritage Bid by highlighting the heritage significance of Adelaide in ways that the public can understand, make the case credible, and include the perspectives of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people.

The current bid sees Adelaide and its Rural Settlement Landscapes as the two components of the project which have been brought together here following two previous and separate World Heritage projects: the Adelaide Park Lands and City Layout World Heritage Bid and the Mount Lofty Ranges Agrarian Landscapes World Heritage Bid. After a Council meeting on 12 March 2024, the City of Adelaide made a decision to lead the development of the Tentative List Submission (City of Adelaide, n.d.-a). This gives the project both a heritage and a strategic communication dimension.

Adelaide Park Lands and City Layout have been identified at a national level as an outstanding example of a nineteenth-century colonial urban planning. Yet streets and parks, squares and buildings, and planning are probably not the only things in the World Heritage story. Adelaide was planned on Kurna Country so that public communication of heritage must also recognize this cultural landscape.

The portfolio addresses a communication gap that is revealed by the project: City of Adelaide possesses quite a few heritage content items, but the story that is intended for audiences is scattered and can be found in many platforms and documents. It's not about the lack of content. The problem is that not all audiences will immediately understand the connection between Kurna Country, Pirltawardli, Park Lands, colonial planning, and World Heritage Bid.

Pirltawardli is a great starting point as it relates to a place where different story layers are found and are together: Kurna Country, mission history, Kurna language learning, colonial disruption, exclusion, and public memory. Replacing the broader World Heritage narrative by a single site is not the goal. On the contrary, the proposed campaign is to use Pirltawardli as a door to the wider story.

These professional communication drafts included in the portfolio mostly reflect the publicly available sources, official City of Adelaide material, historical information, and strategic communication planning principles. No formal interviews, surveys, or focus groups were carried out. Any public-facing version of this campaign would likely need to consult, co-design, and obtain permission from the Kaurna Traditional Owners as well as City of Adelaide staff before being released.

2. Portfolio Overview and Word Equivalence

The portfolio showcases an assortment of professional communication materials created for the Reframing Pirltawardli project.

The chosen pieces reveal the writer's range from conducting research, content planning, honed public writing, developing social media content, video scripting, place-based digital engagement to evaluation planning.

This portfolio is structured a series of geared communication outputs rather than a one single report. Each piece align with the same communication objective: to leverage Pirltawardli as a respectful narrative entry point into the City of Adelaide's broader World Heritage Bid story.

Portfolio Item	Format	Estimated Word Equivalent
Introduction and client overview	Written overview	500
Work Sample 1: Research and Content Audit Snapshot	Report / table	450
Work Sample 2: Pirltawardli Backgrounder / Fact Sheet	Backgrounder / fact sheet	450
Work Sample 3: Website Landing Page Copy	Website copy	500
Work Sample 4: Social Media Content Pack	Captions, carousel copy and reel concept	1700
Work Sample 5: Four-Week Social Media Calendar	Calendar / planning table	300
Work Sample 6: Short Explainer Video Script and Storyboard	Video script / storyboard	300
Work Sample 7: QR Marker and Digital User Journey	QR copy / navigation flow	300
Work Sample 8: Evaluation Snapshot	Evaluation table	300
Total		Approximately 4,800 words equivalent

We say the word equivalence is approximate because some of the items, like the social media carousel, video script, QR journey, and calendar, are pieces of professional communication rather than very formal essay-style writing. We have included these types of materials since they are pertinent to the communication tasks for a public storytelling campaign.

3. Work Sample 1: Research and Content Audit Snapshot

Description and Strategic Purpose

It is a research and content audit snapshot, a sample, in my view. It articulates the essence of the whole portfolio by mapping existing public information and identifying where the communication gap is. Its strategic goal is to explain that the campaign proposal will not invent a new heritage story ex nihilo. Rather, it will illustrate how official and public materials, which already exist, can be linked to create a more comprehensible audience journey. I created this piece on my own after going through City of Adelaide sources, public heritage information, and historical background material. The target audience for this piece is City of Adelaide staff, communication practitioners, and project stakeholders.

Produced Work

Research and Content Audit Snapshot

Source Reviewed	Relevance to Project	Communication Value
City of Adelaide World Heritage Bid page (City of Adelaide, n.d.-a)	Explains the combined World Heritage Bid and Tentative List process	Provides official project context
City of Adelaide Heritage Strategy (City of Adelaide, n.d.-b)	Outlines long-term heritage priorities	Shows organisational alignment
City of Adelaide Kurna Voices (City of Adelaide, n.d.-c)	Provides cultural mapping and Kurna storytelling	Strong existing digital storytelling platform
Kurna Place Naming page (City of Adelaide, n.d.-d)	Provides naming context for Possum Park / Pirltawardli	Supports accurate terminology
SA History Hub Pirltawardli entry (Harris, 2014)	Provides historical background on Pirltawardli	Useful factual base for copywriting
Australian Government National Heritage information	Explains the Adelaide Park Lands and City Layout significance	Supports wider heritage context

Main Findings

- The City of Adelaide is well-endowed with heritage material. The problem is not a lack of content.
- The pieces of content are currently scattered on several different sites, such as the World Heritage Bid page, Kurna Voices, heritage strategy pages, and historical sources.
- General public may struggle to find the link between Pirltawardli and the wider World Heritage Bid.
- Pirltawardli has a powerful storytelling potential as it brings together the elements of Country, language, mission history, colonial intrusion, and memory.

- Honor and respect are essential in communicating. Materials meant for the public should actually be shared with Kurna partners for their input before publication.

Communication Gap

Indeed, the chief communication gap is the lack of a single concept or narrative connecting the different audience-facing steps:

Pirltawardli → Kurna Country → Adelaide's colonial city plan → World Heritage Bid → truth-telling and public understanding

Strategic Opportunity

The story of Pirltawardli can become the main plot within an interconnected digital storytelling campaign. Pirltawardli is not the only site featured in the World Heritage Bid, but it offers a more comprehensible starting point for the audiences.

4. Work Sample 2: Pirltawardli Fact Sheet

Description and Strategic Purpose

This sample is a fact sheet designed for staff, media, educators and community organisations. It supports the wider portfolio by providing a concise and reliable background resource that can sit behind social media, website content and public enquiries. Its strategic purpose is to make key information clear without overwhelming the audience. I developed this item independently by selecting relevant public facts and rewriting them in a plain professional style. The intended audience should read it as an introductory backgrounder, not as a complete historical account.

Produced Work

Pirltawardli Fact Sheet

A Place-Based Entry Point into Adelaide's World Heritage Story

What is Pirltawardli?

Historically also called Piltawodli, Pirltawardli is a significant Kaurna place situated in the Adelaide Park Lands, just north of Karrawirra Pari / River Torrens. Actually, it had been a favorite Kaurna camping ground even before the arrival of Europeans. The term Pirltawardli is generally linked to possums, and accordingly, this area is also referred to as Possum Park (City of Adelaide, n.d.-d; Harris, 2014).

Why is it significant?

Christian mission for Aboriginal people was first launched in South Australia in 1839 at Pirltawardli. The mission was interpreted to be the Kaurna language school and first writings of Kaurna culture (Harris, 2014).

What happened in 1845?

Governor Grey was the one who commanded the school's closure and the demolition of the huts in 1845. Aboriginal people were not permitted to enter the fenced area. This turning point illustrates the colonial policies which interrupted the Kaurna people's way of life, education and attachment to place (Harris, 2014).

Why does it matter today?

Through Pirltawardli, audiences are able to grasp the fact that the city of Adelaide was not just a blank slate for the planners. This site is a link connecting the story of World Heritage to Kaurna Country, language, disruption, memory and truth-telling.

How does it connect to the World Heritage Bid?

Adelaide's Park Lands and the City Layout are the main things with which the World Heritage Bid is associated. By the means of Pirltawardli, audiences come to understand the Aboriginal cultural landscape even before the city existed and still continuing to this day, which helps to enlarge the narrative.

Key Message

Pirltawardli serves as the vehicle through which audiences realize that the story of Adelaide's heritage is not just the story of architectural planning. It is, actually, also the story of Country, language, disruption, memory and truth-telling.

Cultural Note

Interpretations of Pirltawardli made available to the public must be based on consultation with Kaurna Traditional Owners and relevant cultural advisers. This fact sheet is merely a draft communication sample.

5. Work Sample 3: Website Landing Page Copy

Description and Strategic Purpose

This sample is draft website copy for a campaign landing page. It fits within the portfolio as the central digital hub that the social media posts, QR marker and visual assets would direct audiences toward. Its strategic purpose is to make the campaign's key idea accessible in one public-facing location. I developed the copy independently as a digital storytelling piece. The intended audience includes residents, students, visitors, teachers and Park Lands users. The desired audience response is to begin learning through Pirltawardli and then continue to wider City of Adelaide heritage resources.

Produced Work

Reframing Pirltawardli

A place to begin Adelaide's wider World Heritage story

It was Kurna Country here before Adelaide was planned.

Pirltawardli is one of those places where the different parts of the Adelaide story can be found meeting each other. It is related to pre-contact Kurna life, mission history, language learning, colonial disruption and living memory. At the same time, it makes us see why Adelaide's World Heritage story needs to be told sensitively.

The City of Adelaide's World Heritage Bid is not just about the streets, buildings and park lands. Along with these, it is also about the land on which the city was planned, the people who have always belonged to that land, and the histories that continue to shape how Adelaide is understood today.

Why Pirltawardli?

Pirltawardli was a Kurna's ground for camping even before the first Christian mission for Aboriginal people was set up there in South Australia in 1839. Here, at the mission, Kurna children were being taught in the Kurna language. In 1845, however, the school was closed and the Aboriginal people were excluded from the site.

This presents a difficult past, but it is an important one all the same. Pirltawardli points audiences to the idea that heritage is not merely about things that have been preserved, but also about things that have been interrupted, remembered and retold.

Explore the story

Country

Adelaide is situated on Kurna Country. The Park Lands and city framework are a part of a region holding Kurna cultural significance.

Language

Important Kurna language and cultural knowledge records are linked to Pirltawardli.

Disruption

The school's closure and Aboriginal people's exclusion from the site illustrate the disruption of Kurna life and connection to place by colonization.

Memory

Pirltawardli today encourages us to think about the ways Adelaide narrates history and whose voices are given prominence.

Continue learning

Discover Kurna Voices.

Get familiar with the World Heritage Bid.

Check out the campaign fact sheet and visual explainer.

Pay a respectful visit to the Adelaide Park Lands.

Cultural Note

This page serves as a quick introduction rather than an exhaustive story. The telling of Pirltawardli in public must be led by Kurna Traditional Owners and approved cultural sources.

6. Work Sample 4: Social Media Content Pack

Description and Strategic Purpose

This sample is a social media content pack designed for Instagram, Facebook, LinkedIn and short-form video. It supports the portfolio by translating the campaign strategy into platform-ready content. Its strategic purpose is to build awareness, create a first point of contact and direct audiences to the landing page or QR pathway. I developed the captions, carousel text, reel concept and hashtag strategy independently. The audience should receive this content as a respectful invitation to learn, not as tourism promotion or a complete historical explanation.

Produced Work

Post 1 — Instagram Carousel

Format: 6-slide carousel

Audience: Adelaide locals, students, youth and visitors

Purpose: Awareness, introduction to the topic

Before Adelaide was planned, this was Kaurna Country.

Pirltawardli / Adelaide Park Lands

ariaaaa_li Adelaide's World Heritage story is about much more than streets, squares and parklands. It is, in fact, about the land underneath them and the people who have always been part of that land.

Pirltawardli is essentially one doorway to this broader issue. It is through this that Kaurna Country, language, mission history, colonial disruption and truth-telling are all connected.

More information can be found on the Reframing Pirltawardli story page.

#kaurnacountry #adelaideparklands #AdelaideHeritage
#truthtelling

Slide 1

Pirltawardli is a significant Kaurna place in the Adelaide Park Lands.

ariaaaa_li Adelaide's World Heritage story is about much more than streets, squares and parklands. It is, in fact, about the land underneath them and the people who have always been part of that land.

Pirltawardli is essentially one doorway to this broader issue. It is through this that Kaurna Country, language, mission history, colonial disruption and truth-telling are all connected.

More information can be found on the Reframing Pirltawardli story page.

#kaurnacountry #adelaideparklands #AdelaideHeritage #truthtelling

It was already a Kaurna camping ground
before a mission was established there in 1839.

Pirltawardli / Adelaide Park Lands

ariaaaa_li Adelaide's World Heritage story is about much more than streets, squares and parklands. It is, in fact, about the land underneath them and the people who have always been part of that land.

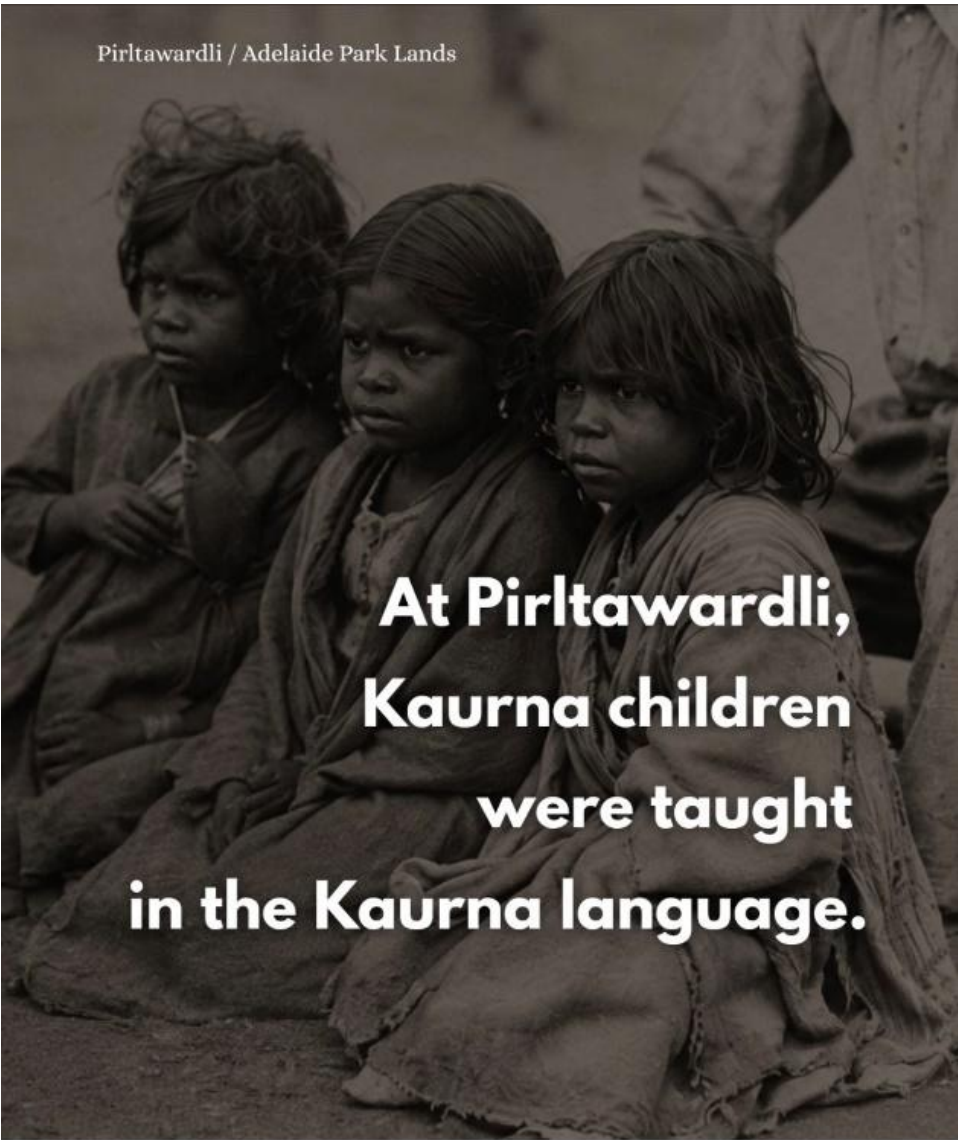

Pirltawardli is essentially one doorway to this broader issue. It is through this that Kaurna Country, language, mission history, colonial disruption and truth-telling are all connected.

More information can be found on the Reframing Pirltawardli story page.

#kaurnacountry #adelaideparklands #AdelaideHeritage
#truthtelling

Slide 3

Pirltawardli / Adelaide Park Lands

At Pirltawardli, Kurna children were taught in the Kurna language.

ariaaaa_li Adelaide's World Heritage story is about much more than streets, squares and parklands. It is, in fact, about the land underneath them and the people who have always been part of that land.

Pirltawardli is essentially one doorway to this broader issue. It is through this that Kurna Country, language, mission history, colonial disruption and truth-telling are all connected.

More information can be found on the Reframing Pirltawardli story page.

#kurnacountry #adelaideparklands #AdelaideHeritage
#truthtelling

Slide 4

Pirltawardli / Adelaide Park Lands

In 1845,
the school was closed
and Aboriginal people were excluded from the site.

ariaaaa_li Adelaide's World Heritage story is about much more than streets, squares and parklands. It is, in fact, about the land underneath them and the people who have always been part of that land.

Pirltawardli is essentially one doorway to this broader issue. It is through this that Kurna Country, language, mission history, colonial disruption and truth-telling are all connected.

More information can be found on the Reframing Pirltawardli story page.

#kurnacountry #adelaideparklands #AdelaideHeritage
#truthtelling

Slide 5

Today,
Pirltawardli helps us understand Adelaide's heritage through Country, language, disruption and memory.

Pirltawardli / Adelaide Park Lands

ariaaaa_li Adelaide's World Heritage story is about much more than streets, squares and parklands. It is, in fact, about the land underneath them and the people who have always been part of that land.

Pirltawardli is essentially one doorway to this broader issue. It is through this that Kurna Country, language, mission history, colonial disruption and truth-telling are all connected.

More information can be found on the Reframing Pirltawardli story page.

#kurnacountry #adelaideparklands #AdelaideHeritage
#truthtelling

Slide 6

Post 2 — Facebook Post

Format: Image + caption

Audience: Adelaide locals, families, community and senior members

Purpose: Public understanding and community education

XXXXX

existPreserving Pirtawardli

1 minute · Adelaide, South Australia · 🌐

Pirtawardli is one of the places where the story of Adelaide wants to be complicated, challenging and deeply meaningful.

Situated in the Adelaide Park Lands, Pirtawardli was a traditional Kaurna camping site before the first Christian mission for Aboriginal people in South Australia was set up there in 1839. The location is linked with Kaurna language teaching, early colonial contact and subsequent exclusion.

As Adelaide's World Heritage nomination progresses, sites like Pirtawardli are a reminder that heritage is not only about a physical building. But heritage is also about Country, memory and truth-telling.

Discover the story and see how Pirtawardli is connected with the broader World Heritage narrative. Collapse

Before Adelaide was planned, this was Kaurna Country.

Pirtawardli is a significant Kaurna place in the Adelaide Park Lands.

It was already a Kaurna camping ground before a mission was established there in 1839.

At Pirtawardli, Kaurna children were taught in the Kaurna language.

In 1845, the school ⁺² closed and Aboriginal people were excluded from the site.

Commenting as XXXXX

18

Post 3 — LinkedIn Post

Format: Image + caption

Audience: Professionals in the field of cultural heritage, educators, local government officials, communications professionals, and community stakeholders

Purpose: Professional credibility and stakeholder engagement

XXXXX • You
--
now •

...

How can a complex story of World Heritage be made understandable and also respectful to public audiences?

The Reframing Pirltawardli proposal illustrates how one place-based story can be the door through which to a broader heritage story is accessed. The campaign does not depict Pirltawardli as a separate story, but rather an entry point into the interrelations between Kaurna Country, the colonial city plan of Adelaide, language, disruption and public memory.

Public communication by local government should aim not only at an increase in the volume of published information. The point is to weave the existing heritage materials into a consistent, moral and publicly-directed narrative flow.

Reframing Pirltawardli

A place-based story for Adelaide's World Heritage Bid

 Like  Comment  Repost  Send

 1 impression View analytics

7. Work Sample 5: Four-Week Social Media Calendar

Description and Strategic Purpose

This is an example of a four-week social media calendar designed for a soft campaign launch. Including it in the portfolio is a good demonstration of how the content pack may be planned over time, as opposed to posting randomly. A key element of the strategy here is to convert audiences through stages - initially from awareness to deep understanding and then to place-based engagement. I did the calendar independently aligning different platforms with target audiences, content types and campaign objectives. Ultimately this item in the portfolio is addressing the City of Adelaide communications team.

Produced Work

Week	Platform	Content Type	Topic	Objective	Call to Action
Week 1	Instagram	Carousel	"Before Adelaide was planned..."	Awareness	Visit story page
Week 1	Facebook	Image + caption	What is Pirltawardli?	Awareness	Read fact sheet
Week 1	LinkedIn	Professional post	Place-based storytelling	Stakeholder engagement	Learn about the campaign
Week 2	Instagram Reel	Short video	Country, language, disruption, memory	Engagement	Watch full story
Week 2	Facebook	Long caption	1839 mission and Kurna language	Understanding	Explore Kurna Voices
Week 2	Stories	Link sticker / explainer	Start with Pirltawardli	Passive engagement	Tap to learn more
Week 3	Instagram	Carousel	Four words to understand Pirltawardli	Understanding	Save and share
Week 3	LinkedIn	Post	Ethical storytelling and cultural review	Credibility	Read project approach
Week 3	Facebook	Link post	Visual explainer and fact sheet	Education	Download resource
Week 4	Instagram	Static post	Visit the site respectfully	Place-based engagement	Scan QR on-site
Week 4	Facebook	Community post	Continue learning about Kurna heritage	Support	Explore map
Week 4	LinkedIn	Evaluation post	What we are learning from engagement	Transparency	Follow updates

Initially the calendar provides introductory informative content only. Then it progresses into ethical storytelling, visual explainers and QR-linked learning. It is a soft launch because the issue is a highly sensitive one from a cultural perspective and needs to be overseen carefully.

8. Work Sample 6: Short Explainer Video Script and Storyboard

Description and Strategic Purpose

This piece is the script and storyboard for a short explainer video. It complements the portfolio by transforming the main message of the campaign into a product that is suitable for Instagram Reels, the landing page, Facebook and also the classroom environment. The key strategic function is to provide audiences, who may not be inclined to read a lengthy webpage, with a quick and easy entry point. I single-handedly planned the narrative structure, voiceover and visual direction. Thinking of the audience, it is expected that they will consider this video as their first start which will lead them to engage in further learning.

Produced Work

Title: Reframing Pirltawardli Length: 60–90 seconds

Tone: Respectful, clear and reflective

Time	Visual Direction	Voiceover
0–5 sec	Soft shot of Adelaide Park Lands	Before Adelaide was planned, this was Kurna Country.
5–12 sec	Map-style animation showing Adelaide and River Torrens	Pirltawardli is a significant Kurna place in the Adelaide Park Lands, near Karrawirra Pari / River Torrens.
12–22 sec	Historical map texture / “1839” on screen	In 1839, the first Christian mission for Aboriginal people in South Australia was established here.
22–32 sec	Text overlay: “Language”	At Pirltawardli, Kurna children were taught in the Kurna language.
32–45 sec	Text overlay: “1845” / slow fade	But in 1845, the school was closed and Aboriginal people were excluded from the site.
45–58 sec	Present-day Park Lands	Today, Pirltawardli helps us understand Adelaide's heritage in a deeper way.
58–70 sec	Words on screen: Country / Language / Disruption / Memory	It is not only a story of planning. It is a story of Country, language, disruption and memory.
70–85 sec	QR code or website animation	Start with Pirltawardli. Then explore the wider World Heritage story.
85–90 sec	End card	Reframing Pirltawardli. Learn more through the City of Adelaide.

Production Notes

- Use calm, place-based visuals.
- Do not use dramatic or sensational music.
- Accessibility is enhanced when captions are used.
- Archival or cultural materials can only be used with permission and approval.

9. Work Sample 7: QR Marker and Digital User Journey

Description and Strategic Purpose

Such a QR marker and mobile user journey are our examples. It aligns well with our portfolio as it relates the physical site of Pirltawardli to the digital campaign. The strategy behind this is to help placebased engagement of Park Lands users, local residents, students and visitors. The text for the marker and the navigation route were my creations. The audience perception of the item will be as a respectful, cleanly designed and straightforward way of prompting them to find out more specifically when they are physically present at the site.

Produced Work

QR Marker Draft Copy

Heading:

Pirltawardli: Start the Story Here

Short Copy:

Long before the establishment of Adelaide, this was Kaurna Country. Pirltawardli embodies Kaurna life, language, mission history, colonial disruption and living memory. Scan to find out how this place is connected with Adelaide's wider World Heritage story.

QR Prompt:

Scan to discover more

Cultural Note:

This is public information and intended for learning but it needs to be Kaurna cultural reviewed.

Mobile User Journey

Step 1: On-site encounter A visitor, student or a user of the Park Lands discovers the QR marker near the site.

Step 2: QR scan The individual scans the QR code, which opens a mobile-friendly page titled "Reframing Pirltawardli".

Step 3: First message Before Adelaide was formally laid out, this area was home to the Kaurna people.

Step 4: Four story buttons Country Language Disruption Memory

Step 5: Wider heritage link An invitation is extended to the user to view the connection of Pirltawardli to the World Heritage Bid.

Step 6: Continue learning User is redirected to Kaurna Voices, the World Heritage Bid page, the fact sheet and infographic resource through links.

Risk Control

The QR path should not be designed to collect personal information except for the usual level of analytics. There should be no surveys or formal feedback questions on the path unless ethics approval has been given.

10. Work Sample 8: Evaluation Snapshot

Description and Strategic Purpose

This piece of work is essentially a brief evaluation snapshot of the proposed campaign. As a part of the portfolio, it reflects how the campaign can be evaluated after its launch. Strategically, this piece aims to evaluate the campaign not only in terms of visibility but also in terms of engagement, understanding, process quality and communication risk. I created the evaluation categories and indicators on my own. The primary recipients of this piece would be the staff of the City of Adelaide who are in charge of campaign monitoring, reporting and refinement.

Produced Work

Reframing Pirltawardli Evaluation Snapshot

Level	What is Measured	Example Indicators
Outputs	What was produced	Landing page, posts, QR marker, fact sheet, infographic assets
Outtakes	How audiences interacted	Clicks, QR scans, video views, shares, saves, time on page
Outcomes	What changed in understanding	Better recognition of Pirltawardli, more informed engagement
Process	How responsibly it was delivered	Cultural review, internal approval, partner feedback
Risk	What issues appeared	Harmful comments, misinterpretation, tokenistic framing concerns

Data Sources

Tool	Purpose
Website analytics	Track visits, time on page and link clicks
QR analytics	Measure place-based engagement
Social media analytics	Track reach, saves, shares and completion rates
Comment monitoring	Identify confusion or harmful discussion
Staff review	Assess message consistency
Partner feedback	Assess cultural safety and appropriateness
Fact sheet / infographic downloads	Measure public and student interest

Monthly Evaluation Questions

- What kind of content got the most meaningful attention?
- Was there a transition of the audience from social media to the website?
- Did the QR scan data reflect effective place-based engagement?
- Did people actually visit Kurna Voices or World Heritage sites after clicking through?
- Were there any indications of misunderstandings or hateful remarks?
- Was any content revised after receiving internal or partner feedback?

Ethical Limitation

The evaluation is carried out without any use of surveys, interviews, or focus groups. Comments and interactions can be considered as passive engagement indicators, but it would be incorrect to use them as formal research data.